Peer review session: Andrea Sze and Daphne Stams

I peer reviewed with two people for this assignment. My first peer review was with Daphne Stams. When reviewing her map, I found some critiques with the colour of her labels, as they were a bit difficult to read. I also suggested that she add a more descriptive legend. Aside from those two minor critiques, I really enjoyed Daphne's map and I think it was executed very nicely. In terms of my own map, Daphne recommended to me that I clean up the background of the map, getting rid of certain labels and layers that clutter the ski slopes. I took her advice and got rid of everything aside from natural features, city and neighborhood names. I also kept mountain names and added a fun symbol to represent mountains. The second person I peer reviewed with was Andrea Sze. Andrea told me that it would be a great idea to add the other North Shore Mountains to my map, but because of time constraints I did not do this. She did also help me center my legend and worked through an issue I was having with the shading with me. This was very helpful. Andrea's map was looking very nice, but I suggested she add point markers for the ferry terminals. We concluded that this might be a little bit out of reach of this assignment and would require a lot more time to complete. Aside from this, Andrea and I both liked each other's respective maps. During the process of making the map, I also consulted with Sarah Kelly for assistance on my html code when I ran into some issues with the interactivity.
